Ella is a Fellow of Oxford Leadership Academy, Canada.

She is an accredited facilitator of the Self Managing Leadership™ program.

She has been providing business planning, marketing, and coaching for over 10 years in variety of sectors in Canada and the eastern United States. Prior to that she held a number of senior marketing and management positions with national and multi-national companies in manufacturing and transportation. She holds an MBA and undergraduate degree in business as well as professional coach training.

The focus of her consulting business is working closely with owners and managers to clearly define their goals and develop detailed strategies to achieve those goals. Important in the process is identifying what success truly looks like for the individual to ensure a strong level of motivation and alignment between the client and their organisation.

She has worked with business owners, corporate management, learning institutions and government agencies. In addition to working with the Oxford Leadership academy, she has delivered a number of workshops on strategic planning and leadership development independently and as part of the Shambhala Institute for Authentic Leadership.
