Jonas Lindholm is a Fellow of Oxford Leadership Academy.

He is an expert in strategy, business processes and the execution of major projects.

Jonas has a Master's degree in Industrial Engineering, and has worked with many large international companies, helping them with strategic and operational management- and change-related issues ranging from Corporate Finance, Risk Management, M&A's and financial strategies to market strategies, operational optimisation and IT systems management.

He has worked as the Head of Business Area Risk Advisory Services at KPMG and as Vice President at Pöyry Group, Energy Business Consulting.

Prior to joining Oxford as head of European Operations he worked with ABB Group as Vice President in ABB Financial Services, managing financial commodities trading ventures.

Jonas brings a wealth of knowledge and understanding to issues relating to the management of large corporations, efficient project management and financial and operational processes.

His solid background in applied engineering sciences, combined with his experience, ensures a realistic approach in meeting the challenges of today's business.

Since 1992, Jonas has managed many large projects throughout Europe, in North America and in Asia, and he has a wide experience in corporate change management and strategies as well as in developing the market environment.

He speaks 6 languages and is an experienced OLDP trainer having facilitated many courses in Oxford, UK as well as in Scandinavia.
