Sevim is a Fellow of the Oxford Leadership Academy in Denmark. She is an experienced facilitator, consultant and coach, who with great empathy and knowledge challenges, leads and facilitates change, development and growth processes for individuals and organizations.

Sevim works with a wide range of large and medium-sized companies in Scandinavia and the rest of Europe.

She acts as a consultant, sparring partner and facilitator to executive management teams, middle managers and Human Resources departments.

In her work, Sevim focuses on supporting organizations in executing their plans by aligning people, culture and strategy with a purpose beyond product and profit.

Besides that, she is very passionate about supporting individuals in their personal growth by helping them become more aware of their innate potential, and by helping them obtain more self-awareness so that they can see and change unsuitable convictions and patterns and thereby be successful in achieving the goals they set for themselves.

With more than 17 years of experience within research, marketing, communication, leadership, relation management, and business development, and of this, almost 10 years of experience as a consultant, coach, sparring partner, and facilitator, Sevim has a thorough knowledge of problems and challenges in several industries.

Some of the companies Sevim has worked with in Scandinavia and Europe are Novo Nordisk, TV2, Statoil, SEB-bank, O2 and several others.

Sevim graduated with an MSC in Marketing from Copenhagen Business School in 1995 and subsequently worked in the fields of marketing and communication in a larger investment fund and the IT-industry. As Sevim always have had a personal interest in psychology and the study of human behaviour she decided in 2001 to combine her commercial experience with psychology graduating from a 4 year education as psychotherapist. Sevim's objective was naturally to integrate these competencies in her daily work.
