Bart Romanow is a Fellow of the Oxford Leadership. He supports institutional clients in Strategic Planning, as well as monitoring and evaluating their operations. He brings many years of experience in strategic training and organisational development. Bart is based in Norway.

Active as a business and life coach, he worked with portfolio of clients from various sectors, including telecom (Telenor Norway), interior design (PI Concept), innovation brokers (Warsaw University of Technology) and renewable construction (Passive House). He served for example “Foundation in Support of Local Democracy” and “Centre for Local Government Education and Studies” with many national and international training projects.

Bart has worked as a Senior Consultant, Trainer and Manager for more than 15 years. His trainings have addressed SMEs, governments of various levels and NGOs in developing countries such as Poland, Serbia, Croatia and Georgia. Over the last 6 years he has established the International Projects Department at Oxford Research from scratch. Starting with no leads, today his team is serving top international clients such as the European Commission and the Nordic Council of Ministers. Bart has worked with CEOs, high level expert groups and demanding large international organisations. He facilitated economic development processes in many developing regions.

Bart holds an MA in International Relations, is a certified Internal Auditor and Manager of Quality Management System according to ISO 9001 standard. He holds a diploma with distinction of the Leaders School by Open Society Institute and Batory Trust Oxford and is undergoing certification with Associate Certified Coach (ACC) by the International Coach Federation.

Bart works in English, Norwegian and Polish.
