

---

EXECUTIVE PROFILE

---

Angela Airall
FELLOW

“Angela has a charming, engaging leadership presence. It’s never about her; it’s all about them. Her respect for all people, her passion for educating and developing leaders, her appreciation of the potential of staff in the service of helping leaders learn and grow, be the best they can be, is palpable. Her every word and action supports this goal.”

Dr. Frances Hesselbein
 CEO 1976 - 1990
 Girl Scouts of the USA

“Angela, is one of those rare people you meet in life - a true inspiration. She is tremendously creative and always gives her full attention and devotion to the issue at hand. Her ability to provide client solutions that really are timely, targeted and appropriate is incredible to be a part of. I always had only the best experiences working with Angela.”

Dr. Alex Cho
 Assistant Professor
 Duke University School of Medicine

Angela is a Fellow of Oxford Leadership. Her consulting work emphasises the development of Individuals, Teams, Organisations and Industries. With over 30 years of consulting experience across multiple industries, Angela brings a unique style of artful assessment, generous listening and reflective inquiry. During her time at Johnson & Johnson, Angela consulted to business leaders across the consumer, medical device and pharmaceutical sectors. Angela is based in the USA.

As former Chief Learning Officer Angela’s background includes working with CEOs, College Presidents, Senior Managers, High Potential Leaders and Board of Directors to implement Talent Management strategies across global enterprises. She has coached hundreds of leaders with The Center for Creative Leadership.

Angela is the architect of the Duke Leadership Academy building and leading the Executive Coaching Practice at Duke University. At Johnson and Johnson, she pioneered Leader View’s Global High Potential Talent Management strategy. She recently launched the Talent Management Succession Planning strategy at Duke Medicine building the bench for Division Chiefs and Medical Chairs resulting in a stronger female leadership bench.

Angela is a graduate of the University of Southern California and has an MBA in Marketing from Boston University. She holds numerous Training Program Certifications and is a Graduate of the Executive Management Program at Harvard Business School. Angela is Author of ‘Teams at Work’ published by Pfeiffer & Co and contributing author to ‘Leadership: The Eleanor Roosevelt way’.

Angela works in English.